The Presbytery shall review, evaluate, and amend its mission priorities at least every three years and make such modifications to the design of Presbytery as these changing mission priorities require.

DESIGN

The Presbytery of the Peaks has organized itself into the various groupings described below in order to carry out its mission. The Coordinating Cabinet (or Cabinet), standing committees (with continuing programmatic or ecclesiastical responsibilities) and commissions, together with the officers of Presbytery, exist by mandate of the Book of Order or by the decisions of the governing body and are elected by the governing body. Select committees are appointed by the Presbytery Moderator to fulfill a particular function for the duration of a single meeting of the governing body. Work groups or task forces are established by authority of the Cabinet or the standing committees themselves and are appointed by the unit to which they are immediately responsible. Work groups or task forces usually shall be proposed to and approved by the Cabinet if there are budgetary implications.

The Cabinet is composed of elected at-large members and standing committee chairs and assigned the task of overseeing and coordinating the work of Presbytery. Committees and commissions are defined by the Book of Order. (G-3.0109)

Unless otherwise specified, members and chairs of all standing committees shall be nominated by the Committee on Nominations and elected by the Presbytery. The chair of each standing committee shall be elected annually by Presbytery from among the members of the committee and may serve no more than three consecutive one-year terms. The committee itself may select from among its members a vice-chair and a recording clerk who are eligible to succeed themselves.

A work group is organized to carry out an ongoing set of related tasks that the parent unit considers can be better accomplished by a subunit. The parent unit shall monitor its work groups regularly, review their accomplishments annually, and evaluate their structure and continuing viability triennially.

A task force is organized to carry out a single task, ordinarily estimated to take no more than two years to complete, which the parent unit considers can be better accomplished by a subunit. A task force may meet in convenient and cost-effective groupings. The parent unit shall monitor its task forces regularly.

Work group or task force members who are members of the parent unit may be appointed to serve up to six consecutive one-year terms. Work group or task force members who are not members of the parent unit may be appointed by the parent unit to serve up to three consecutive one-year terms. At least one member of the parent unit shall serve on each work group or task force. Occasionally, for the particular expertise each offers, a person who is not a member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may be appointed as a nonvoting advisory member of a work group or task force. The chair of any work group or task force shall be appointed by its parent unit.

All classes, terms of office and annual references within responsibilities shall be defined within the calendar year, beginning January 1st of each year.
